

ABSTRACTS

УДК 347.78 Y. Yakymenko

WAYS TO PROTECT COPYRIGHT

This article is devoted to ways to protect copyright. In particular, attention is focused on determining the type's ways to protect copyright. Violation of copyright in the person who is the owner, there is a right to protection. If the right to the protection of the person concerned within the limits prescribed by law, shall elect their own forms, means and methods by which it seeks to protect their violated rights. Jurisdictional form of intellectual property is made separate ways: civil law, criminal law and administrative law. The main civil ways of copyright protection are: Definition of Human; restoration of violated rights and suppression of acts infringing or threatening to infringe; Compensation for moral damage; Compensation for damages, including lost profits; Collection of income received by the infringer as a result of copyright infringement instead of compensation; The adoption of other measures stipulated by legislative acts relating to the protection of their rights. Criminal law involves prosecution procedure and copyright infringers to justice. This is possible in case of illegal reproduction and distribution of works willful infringement of copyright and related rights, which caused material damage to a significant amount, and if the violation is committed repeatedly or by prior conspiracy. Administrative – legal procedure for copyright protection involves bringing offenders in case of illegal use of intellectual property rights, leading to a fine of from ten to two hundred times the minimum income with the forfeiture of illegally manufactured products and equipment and material to be for its production.